Now patients in the NY metro area will have easier access to The Lourie Center for Pediatric MS, a comprehensive center dedicated to the clinical care and scientific research of children and adolescents with multiple sclerosis (MS). Launched in 2002 at Stony Brook Medicine, the Lourie Center was formed to address the unmet medical needs of children and adolescents who live with multiple sclerosis. The first of its kind in the nation, the Lourie Center has assembled a unique multidisciplinary team of experts in multiple sclerosis, pediatric neurology, nursing, psychiatry, and neuropsychology, and serves as a model for other centers within the Institute for Advanced Neurosciences at Stony Brook Medicine. The Lourie Center is a designated Center of Excellence by the NMSS.
